NEWS LETTERS FROM BULLETIN REPRESENTATIVES

WILLIMANTIC

SUPERIOR COURT.

Damage Suit for $3,000 for Alleged Accident at Fitch's Crossing on Montville Trolley Line.

Judge Silas A. Robinson reopened the superior court in this city Tuesday, the business of the present term having been finished at Putnam last week. The civil case of M. E. Lincoln, administrator of the estate of John M. Martin vs. the Connecticut company and the New York, New Haven & Hartford Railroad Co., was called for trial.

The complaint alleges that on October 25, 1907, in Montville, a south-bound trolley car struck a four-horse team belonging to John M. Martin, the wagon being loaded with ties at the time. All the horses were badly injured and were not able to do any work thereafter; some died and the others had to be killed. The harnesses and wagon were broken and destroyed. Mr. Martin spent $350 for medicines for the horses and was without the use of them for four months, when they either died or were killed. The value of the horses was not specified in the complaint, but damages of $3,000 are claimed from the trolley company. The accident occurred in the town of Montville at what is termed Fitch's crossing. The administrator, M. E. Lincoln, is represented by Attorneys George W. Melony and Donald G. Perkins. The Connecticut company is represented by Attorney C. E. Searis assisted by Investigator Shepard of the defendant corporation.

Mr. Lincoln, the first witness, showed a map of the crossing in Montville and the surroundings. It was claimed that it was actually impossible for the driver of the team to see the car, as the view of the track at that point was obstructed by a house and a high bank stone wall. Mr. Lincoln stated that Mr. Martin had told him that he valued the lead pair of horses at $500 and the other pair at about the same figure. The wagon was badly crushed and the harnesses broken so that they were of practically no use. The horses never sufficiently recovered after the accident to be able to be worked and failed until they died or had to be killed.

Clinton C. Root, called as the second witness, testified that he worked for Mr. Martin for twelve or fourteen years. Was at work with a four-horse team for him at Montville; the other four-horse team, driven by Mr. Vanness, was ahead of him in the road and when he came up the wagon was across the track and smashed up. The horses were badly scratched and bruised. They were taken to a barn where they were boarded. It took about an hour to remove the pile of ties and clear up the wreck caused by the accident before the car could proceed. Mr. Martin had refused an offer of $300 for the pair of leaders some time before the accident. After the accident the horses could not be used and Dr. Dow doctored them. An effort was made to work the horses, but it proved unsuccessful and when they lay down it was almost impossible to get them to their feet again.

On cross examination witness stated that one pair of the horses went back to Montville and that the pair of leaders drew some ice during the winter that followed the accident.

Dr. B. K. Dow testified that he had treated the horses that were injured. On the Sunday following the accident he had seen the horses at Mr. Martin's barn in this city; in all he saw them on four different occasions. Knew that three of them died, but did not know about the fourth one.

The death of the first occurred on the 27th of January, the second on the 21st of February, and that of the third on the 5th of March. He said that he did not prescribe for the first horse, but the other two grew poor and weak and seemed to suffer from a sort of paralysis. Witness said that he performed autopsies on all four horses.

Court took a recess until 1 o'clock at this time.

When court reopened in the afternoon Dr. Dow resumed his testimony. Stated that he had found injuries to the heart, spine and blood vessels. Gave it as his opinion that the death of the horses was directly caused as a result of the accident.

Clinton Root, employed by Mr. Martin, was recalled and practically corroborated the main points of the previous testimony.

The case was unfinished at the adjournment of court until this morning.

Judgment for Plaintiff.
